Guayamas, Tex., Nov. 12.—The lost Tayapa mines, celebrated in Spanish annals as having produced over eighty million dollars of silver and gold in the seventeenth century, is said to have been discovered in the Sahura district, near Sonora.

London, Nov. 12.—The Daily News today exhaustively surveys the concentration camp in South Africa, with the following conclusions:

"The truth is that the death rate in the camps is incomparably worse than anything Africa or Asia can show.

"There is nothing to match the mortality figures, even in famines, where cholera and other epidemics have had to be contended with at the same time.

Statistics are produced by the News in proof of this assertion.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 8.—Gov. Davis, of Arkansas, is making wholesale pardons of women who have been sentenced to the penitentiary. Gov Davis said: "I do not intend confining women in the State penitentiary as long as I am Governor of Arkansas, unless the legislature gives me a reform school, which is suitable for their incarceration."

There are many women convicts left in the penitentiary, and general jollification reigns since they have been informed of the Governor's intention.

Convict Taken From a Guard.

Columbus, O. Nov. 6.—C. A. Taylor, Alias Charles Lowrey, serving a ten years, sentence for robbing a bank at Chardon, O., assisted by two friends, escaped yesterday from guard Bowman, of the Ohio Penitentiary, on a Cleveland Akron and Columbus train.

Lowrey had been taken to Canton to testify and was being returned to the penitentiary.

As the train reached the outskirts of Columbus two men suddenly grappled with the guard, one of them throwing a handful of cayenne pepper in his eyes. At the same time the prisoner, who was handcuffed, jumped to his feet and ran with his friends to the car door. One of the latter pulled the bell cord and by the time the train stopped all three of the men were on the platform.

Guard Bowman, through blinded and suffering intense pain, followed the men only to be stopped by a revolver thrust into his face. The prisoner and his liberators jumped from the train and ran to the nearest roadway, followed by the guard, who fired several shots at them.

Reaching the road they compelled E. Horney and his wife, who were passing in a phaeton, to descend and give them the rig, in which they escaped. The horse and buggy were found eight miles north of Newark, O.

Even Pike county has gone Democratic. Male correspondence from Pikeville, the county seat, places the majorities of the entire Democratic ticket, including the nominee for Representative, at from 40 to 150.

There is an excess of receipts over expenditures at both the Frankfort and Eddyville penitentiaries.

Mrs Stone Shultz, of Olympia, Bath county, being at the point of death with consumption, was baptized in a novel manner. A trough was made of planks and filled with water and she was lifted from her bed to the trough and was thus immersed.

Mr J. Fletcher Dempsey, a member of the State Railroad Commission, fell from a buggy in Louisville Sunday and was seriously hurt.

On account of the crowded condition of the State School of Reform at Lexington, the Legislature will be asked to appropriate $100,000 to make the necessary improvements.

• HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I feel I may give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, and then a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the hearing would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the ringing ceased to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I am heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

Garden Flower or Banian

By F. H. LANCASTER.

(Copyright, 1901, by Author Syndicate.)

THEY were standing together before a wide expanse of canvas. The woman studied the painting and the man studied the woman. He had known her for a year and yet he knew her not at all. The rugged outside of the businesswoman life was easily comprehended. It was the occasional soft gleaming of poetic tenderness that puzzled him. Was it real?

If it was sham, why did she not do more of it? Certainly it was charming. If it was real, how could she indulge in it so little?

And yet again, if it were not real, how could she stand so fascinated before such a picture, a mass of pine tops against a dim night sky, the trunks lost in the darkness. Low lands of clouds lay above, and rising over all a serene full moon, half veiled by a misty film, the whole scene poetically tender with the evanescent wistfulness of Frank Stanton's love-songs. Why should it appeal to this stern woman of affairs?

Yet so strongly did it appeal to her that she stood there oblivious of all else. Stanford studied her at his leisure.

She was not particularly good-looking. The broad forehead was marked by deep lines between the brows; the straight nose had become aquiline from habits of persistent application; and the mouth was disfigured by an expression of determination. It might have been a good-looking face, even a pretty one, Stanford reflected, if the owner had never got up against the big things of life and resolved to win out or die. How absurd to imagine that those firm lips could have ever been tender!

He had had several business transactions with her and he knew her to be shrewd to hardness. She was the head of the house that had published two of his books and rejected a third. Suddenly Stanford remembered why he had sought her after office hours.

"So your house has decided to refuse 'A Light in the Dark'?" he queried.

"Yes," she replied with uncompromising brevity.

"Why?" he persisted. "There is no need to mince matters. You are the head of the house; you must have a reason and it may prove a valuable side-light to me."

"I am not a literary critic."

"Aye, but why did you refuse to put out my work?"

"No money in it."

"Physiological problems may not be vastly interesting to the multitude, but—" he paused meditatively.

"Whatever is intrinsically good is a safe investment—it will find a market sooner or later."

"Then you hold that my book is not intrinsically good? I have been told by eminent critics that it was a clever piece of work."

"Critics are literary men, not physiologists. You cannot make a correct demonstration from a false hypothesis." The unwillingness to talk died from her eyes and she turned to him with eager insistence.

"You are a physiologist and a shrewd one. You understand the meaning of every line in the human face, but you have overlooked the underlying lines. You accept to the full that saying of Emerson's: 'And the man or woman who would have remained a sunny garden-flower, with no room for his roots and too much sunshine for his head, by the falling of the walls and the neglect of the gardener is made the banian of the forest.' But you have forgotten, as Emerson forgot, that he is ever so much a banian that must still be some kind of the sun-loving garden-flower at his heart. Even while giving its branches in stern protection to the covering things at its roots, it must yearn vaguely for sheltering walls and sunshine," she turned abruptly toward the painting.

Stanford moved a step nearer and stared hard at the canvas. The problem was solved for him. He remembered now to have heard how at her father's death she had taken charge of the nearly bankrupt house, by an absolute devotion of time and energy saved the name from dishonor. More than that. She had made it one of the most prosperous concerns in the city.

Stanford's heart-beats quickened.

True, there was small suggestion of garden-flower beauty in the strong-marked face, but in imagination he saw it suffused with a shy flush of gladness, the firm lips broken into lines of quivering tenderness, the steadiness of the eyes lost in Stanford checked his wayward fancy with a sharp reproof. He was in a public gallery with a publisher who had just rejected the best piece of work he had ever done.

"Do you ever read Stanton's poems?" he asked, in a tone that held a hint of twilight in its tenderness.

"All of them," she returned, without lifting her eyes.

"They are wonderful things—"

"Yes," she interrupted, "but it is the wistfulness of strength, not—"

What an absurd subject for a physiologist and a publisher to be wasting time over! That misty bit of moonlight must have gone to our heads."

"It is exquisitely true to nature," he returned, setting aside her charge of manner.

"Is it? Well, my holiday is over."

"Don't say good-by," he interrupted, quietly. "I am going home with you."

"It will not be worth while. If it had been possible to handle the book with any promise of profit, the house would have accepted it at once."

"I don't want to discuss the book," he interrupted, impatiently.

She looked at him, frankly puzzled.

"Well," she said, "as you like," and then led the way toward the entrance.

Stanford followed with steady determination. Was she at least a garden flower or banian? He was resolved to know. And if not? His thought broke there and he fell to studying the passers by with quiet attentiveness.

The head of the concern had not forgotten his presence, but that serene moon above the darkened trees came between her and all practical thoughts. She attempted to reason upon the cause of his presence, to remain alert. But in a moment her thoughts slipped from her control and ran back to those dim pines massed against the eastern sky. Could it be possible that it was only ten years ago? At 18 she had been a poet of limitless idealism; at 28 she was a hard working woman, given to testing by the sordid standard of dollars and cents.

Stanford took her arm to guide her over a crossing and she smiled involuntarily.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Nothing," she returned.

"I did not know you were the woman to smile at nothing, and," he continued, as they reached the door, "I don't believe you are." He gazed to left and faced her on the steps.

"What were you smiling at?"

"Why, only at the thought of my being guided over a crossing."

Stanford followed her into the library before he spoke again.

"You mean," he said, earnestly, "you have been a banian so long that you have quite forgotten the garden flower's love of sunshine and shelter?"

He placed his hand on the back of the chair and hesitated a moment before dragging it near hers.

"Do you think that you can persuade me that you are a banian quite to the heart—that all your womanly tenderness has been lost beneath a determination to bring the house through?"

"Why, yes."

"You think that you can quite convince me of all that, and yourself?"

"Why, yes, I assure you. I feel quite strong and woody," but she did not meet his eyes. The memory of that moonlight was troubling her, that, and other things.

"You quite believe that? Then you will not mind reading this for me," and he laid Stanton's Even Song on her knee.

She took it up at once:

"Dear heart, life is too long,
The shadows deepen and the waiting light
Drifts to the music of the evening song
And then—Good night."

Dear heart, though love may live
In loitering realms through God's eternal years,
Tis here we heed the joys that it may give,
His tenderness, his care.

And yet such barriers rise
To keep the outstretched, smoldered lamps apart.

What is fulfillment in the far, later skies
When earth is dumb, dear heart?

Stanford's hands closed over hers.

"Tell me," he whispered, "is the garden flower quite dead?"

The hands in his quivered and he stooped to kiss them passionately.

"My queen rose of the rosebud garden of girls."

Garden flower or banian, stern-hearted or tender, love knocks alike at the heart of all, and to each that opens unto him he brings a flood of light, soft-tinted and glad.

One of Twain's Digs.

They tell a good many stories of Mark Twain's doings while in London, but this is one of the best. One day he went to consult a well-known West End dentist, noted for keeping patients waiting a long time, and for indifference to the age of the magazines and papers left on the waiting room table to beguile their tediousness.

Mr. Clemens was kept waiting for a solid hour and when his turn came his patience had given out. But he contented himself, as he entered the consulting room, with the caustic remark: "I see, by your papers, that there is prospect of war with the Transvaal!"—Golden Days.

But Not from Her.

"Well, what on earth did he marry for?"

"For sympathy."

"And he didn't get even that?"

"Oh, yes, from his friends!"—Philadelphia Press.

LACE is a FAVORED MATERIAL FOR TRIMMING

It Will Be Especially Noticeable Throughout the Winter Season.

WE ARE at the beginning of a lace season. Lace will be all through the winter one of the favored trimming materials. This has been true of many seasons in the past, but I do not believe that any of the seasons we have seen in recent years will compare in this respect to the one now at hand. To equal it we must go back to the days of our grandmothers, and, in fact, that is just what many are doing, and out of grandmother's old storerooms are bringing forth beautiful old lace patterns that are being used with excellent effect upon the gowns of the winter. None than this, many are copying the models of those bygone days, only fitting them in a way to the fashions of the present time. The effect secured is a charming combination of simplicity and elaboration, neither too much nor too little of either.

Lace is favored for both evening and after-noon gowns, and the lace is combined with gold cords, tulle, coral, rubies and mock pearls, forming set pieces, such effects, girdles, cuffs, skirt bands and vests. The newer lace effects are in galleons, narrow insertions, headings and bands of every description for appliques on silk, crepe de chine, velvets, cloth, tulle and fancy fabrics. In color the laces are white, black or butter color, and are from the fine Valenciennes to the dullest and point applique.

One of these lace-trimmed gowns, of olden day, and as it is trimmed with lace more older than the fair owner of the delicate gown. It is designed for evening wear and is made of all-over net and point applique lace in white over a delicate yellow silk. The skirt is of the net, with a large floral pattern every so often. Three flounces are of the point applique lace, headed with wee lace heading. The flounces are made much wider toward the back. A tight-fitting bodice of net with long lappet at the back which extends as far as the upper ruffle. This is edged with point applique. The point applique forms a deep sailor collar in the back, with white chiffon draped and caught in large rosettes in the front at the bust line. The chiffon hangs in a cascade to the waist line.

day is long past when anything will do for a belt, and now they are considered almost as much as the gown itself. This season there is an unusual variety in both belts and buckles offered. The buckles are gold plated and set with imitation gems in beautiful designs, which rival the genuine article in everything but price, and that is high enough to be quite up to date. One of the newest things in buckles is made of steel and oxidized silver on black velvet, which is a good background for both metals. Elastic belts come in a variety of colors and widths, studded with silver, steel, gold and jet.

A fancy belt of two elastic bands little more than an inch wide is one novelty. The bands are studded with steel on the lower edges and joined, and separated at the back in girdle form with an ornament of steel and gold, which is fully four inches long. The front clasp is just wide enough to enable the hands to meet. This is shown in the illustration with an another pretty belt made of satin also in girdle form, but not wider than three inches at the back. Over the satin are three strands of satin ribbon with a fancy edge, and wide enough almost to cover the belt. These are held in place by three slides of gold studded with turquoises, one at the back and shorter ones at either side; it is a very effective belt in either black or white.

Buckles made of two or three metals and set with pearls or rhinestones are among the attractions in this line, and then there are the enameled buckles in Egyptian designs. Gun metal is still popular, and some of the prettiest buckles are comprised of rose gold and silver. Added to the elaborate display of buckles are the belt pins, which come in all sorts of fancy designs, and are very much liked because they can be transferred from one belt to another.

OF GRAY BROADCLOTH TRIMMED WITH BLACK LACE AND VELVET.

Elbow sleeves with the point applique to finish.

A lace trimmed gown of more modern appearance is a striking affair of delicate green peau de soie, trimmed with black velvet and duchess lace. The skirt has groups of tucks in front and at the sides, with two flounces tucked half way down and headed and finished at the bottom with wide and narrow black velvet ribbon. The bodice is in small tucks, and slightly bloused, with a yoke and vest of tacked white chiffon. Black velvet ribbon run through heading at the neck, with wide black velvet running in and out of the bodice and caught over the white vest in a butterfly bow. A finish over the shoulders and down the front of duchess lace. Elbow sleeves with deep frill of lace and lace insertion at the upper side.

An out of door garment that is lace trimmed is an evening coat made loose and handy to throw over the fluffy gown of the time is a handsome affair of gray broadcloth trimmed with black French applique, black velvet and fur. It is a loose sack coat reaching nearly to the bottom of the gown. Two rows of black velvet around the bottom, lace applique above with two rows of velvet again above this. The wide, bell-shaped sleeves have velvet at the outer edges, with lace above and finished above that with the velvet. A deep turnover collar of sable, with the lace applique forming a yoke effect below. Rosette of black velvet in front and long streamers to the bottom of the coat.

Some of the crepe de chine gowns are charming when trimmed with velvet ribbon of the same color. This is a new idea for this material and a very popular one, especially for young women. A very pretty model shown at one of the openings has two rows of gray velvet ribbon around the skirt above a two-inch hem. A space of their own width separates these bands, and the effect is very simple, but stylish. The upper part of the skirt is in the tucks to the knee.

But the bodice redeems the gown from any special simplicity, as it is one of the new lace coats in three-quarter length. The flit d'italian lace in cream white is the special kind used in this instance, and the coat is striped up and down its entire length with the same gray velvet ribbons, each decorated at intervals of several inches with a loosely-tied knot of the velvet. The waist portion of the coat is lined with a thin white silk, covered with white chiffon.

Below the waist line is the only thing which is finished on the edge with a plaited frill. To stripe the lace thus with velvet ribbon gives the pretty long lines which almost every woman needs in this kind of gown, as the coat has a tendency to cut her off. Yet she does not need an apparent decrease of stature, if she can really own one of these fascinating coat gowns. They are indeed one of the special novelties of the season, heavy laces being most employed. Irish and Venetian lace are both good styles.

Belts are becoming more and more an important detail of dress. The day is long past when anything will do for a belt, and now they are considered almost as much as the gown itself. This season there is an unusual variety in both belts and buckles offered. The buckles are gold plated and set with imitation gems in beautiful designs, which rival the genuine article in everything but price, and that is high enough to be quite up to date. OF GRAY BROADCLOTH TRIMMED WITH BLACK LACE AND VELVET.

Elbow sleeves with the point applique to finish.

A lace trimmed gown of more modern appearance is a striking affair of delicate green peau de soie, trimmed with black velvet and duchess lace. The skirt has groups of tucks in front and at the sides, with two flounces tucked half way down and headed and finished at the bottom with wide and narrow black velvet ribbon. The bodice is in small tucks, and slightly bloused, with a yoke and vest of tacked white chiffon. Black velvet ribbon run through heading at the neck, with wide black velvet running in and out of the bodice and caught over the white vest in a butterfly bow. A finish over the shoulders and down the front of duchess lace. Elbow sleeves with deep frill of lace and lace insertion at the upper side.

An out of door garment that is lace trimmed is an evening coat made loose and handy to throw over the fluffy gown of the time is a handsome affair of gray broadcloth trimmed with black French applique, black velvet and fur. It is a loose sack coat reaching nearly to the bottom of the gown. Two rows of black velvet around the bottom, lace applique above with two rows of velvet again above this. The wide, bell-shaped sleeves have velvet at the outer edges, with lace above and finished above that with the velvet. A deep turnover collar of sable, with the lace applique forming a yoke effect below. Rosette of black velvet in front and long streamers to the bottom of the coat.

Some of the crepe de chine gowns are charming when trimmed with velvet ribbon of the same color. This is a new idea for this material and a very popular one, especially for young women. A very pretty model shown at one of the openings has two rows of gray velvet ribbon around the skirt above a two-inch hem. A space of their own width separates these bands, and the effect is very simple, but stylish. The upper part of the skirt is in the tucks to the knee.

But the bodice redeems the gown from any special simplicity, as it is one of the new lace coats in three-quarter length. The flit d'italian lace in cream white is the special kind used in this instance, and the coat is striped up and down its entire length with the same gray velvet ribbons, each decorated at intervals of several inches with a loosely-tied knot of the velvet. The waist portion of the coat is lined with a thin white silk, covered with white chiffon.

Below the waist line is the only thing which is finished on the edge with a plaited frill. To stripe the lace thus with velvet ribbon gives the pretty long lines which almost every woman needs in this kind of gown, as the coat has a tendency to cut her off. Yet she does not need an apparent decrease of stature, if she can really own one of these fascinating coat gowns. They are indeed one of the special novelties of the season, heavy laces being most employed. Irish and Venetian lace are both good styles.

Belts are becoming more and more an important detail of dress. The day is long past when anything will do for a belt, and now they are considered almost as much as the gown itself. This season there is an unusual variety in both belts and buckles offered. The buckles are gold plated and set with imitation gems in beautiful designs, which rival the genuine article in everything but price, and that is high enough to be quite up to date. One of the newest things in buckles is made of steel and oxidized silver on black velvet, which is a good background for both metals. Elastic belts come in a variety of colors and widths, studded with silver, steel, gold and jet.

A fancy belt of two elastic bands little more than an inch wide is one novelty. The bands are studded with steel on the lower edges and joined, and separated at the back in girdle form with an ornament of steel and gold, which is fully four inches long. The front clasp is just wide enough to enable the hands to meet. This is shown in the illustration with an another pretty belt made of satin also in girdle form, but not wider than three inches at the back. Over the satin are three strands of satin ribbon with a fancy edge, and wide enough almost to cover the belt. These are held in place by three slides of gold studded with turquoises, one at the back and shorter ones at either side; it is a very effective belt in either black or white.

Buckles made of two or three metals and set with pearls or rhinestones are among the attractions in this line, and then there are the enameled buckles in Egyptian designs. Gun metal is still popular, and some of the prettiest buckles are comprised of rose gold and silver. Added to the elaborate display of buckles are the belt pins, which come in all sorts of fancy designs, and are very much liked because they can be transferred from one belt to another.

Cables in the Philippines.

Our government has concluded that surely and secrecy can only be obtained by a cable ship owned and worked by its own officers. To this end the first official cable vessel will be put in readiness. As necessary as the cable is in times of war, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is of far more importance, for it makes people well. It cures indigestion, flatulency, constipation, biliousness and nervousness, also prevents malaria, fever and ague. We urge you to try it.

"It seems like such funny talk, and yet I suppose it does mean something. Now, right here it says that the Shamrock yawled."

"I don't. And I don't care to learn."

"And then right afterward it says she yuffed. Isn't that a funny word? Is yuffing anything like yawning, George?"

"You may search me, my love. Yuffing and yawning may be the same thing for all I know."

"And then she came up in the wind, George. Do you suppose she was sunk before she came up?"

"No, I don't think so, my love. It's some sort of technical term, I fancy."

"Not technical, George. It's nautical. And then, see here. Here it says that she went about in stays. What do you suppose that means?"

"That's easy, my love. It means that she had mislaid her waist."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SAVED HIS SON'S LIFE.

Mr H H Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan co N Y says: "Our little son, five years old had always been subject to croup, and so had have the attacks been that we have feared many times he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we find that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as an adult. At Haynes

Forty More Battleships.

The programme for new construction, calling for forty warships, announced by the Board of Bureau Chiefs of the Navy Department will probably be adopted by Congress with but few changes.

If any are made by the lawmakers they are more likely to be additional to the list of armor-clads than reduction.

The recommendation for only five armor-clads were made because Secretary Long thinks the sentiment of the country will not approve of more now. The board, if it had not yielded to the judgment of the Secretary, would have recommended at least eight iron-clads.

The adoption of the programme submitted will keep the percentage of our navy slightly ahead of that of Germany. It will not keep us abreast of the increase in the Czar's fleets. The Naval Committee of the two houses of Congress have during recent years always had the navies of the powers mentioned in mind, when making up the parts of the appropriation bill dealing with new construction. Their aim has been to keep ahead of these powers in general percentage.

The stock law turns up with over 1200 majority against it. It might as well been under the rooster, with the rest of us.

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed J. A. Craft, an ex-Democrat, to succeed C. E. Sapp as Internal Revenue Collector at Louisville.

Louisville is not entitled to much credit in going Democratic this year. She must do the thing in presidential years before she gets more than a half-hearted shake from this country Jake.

Ex-Governor Bradley and Senator Hoar have different ideas of the fitness of some things, though both are rock-ribbed Republicans. Hoar declined to deliver an oration in memory of the late President McKinley because he differed with him on the Philippine question. Bradley was called upon to make the chief speech at the unveiling of a statue of Thos Jefferson in Louisville the other day, and the father of Democracy was praised in a style to suit the most ardent Democrat; yet it is pretty generally understood that no part of Jefferson's creed ever met the approval of the versatile ex-Gov.

Gov. Beckham has sent a caution letter to Gov. Durbin of Indiana, resenting the insult which Gov. Durbin casts upon Kentucky and its officials and courts. He accuses Gov. Durbin of violating his oath of office, and of protecting Taylor and Finley in fulfillment of an ante-election pledge. Gov. Durbin is accused of having unjustly and deliberately misquoted the record in the trial of Caleb Powers, in order to bring discredit upon an honest and upright judge. Gov. Beckham cites the opinion of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Davidson case to show that Gov. Durbin has no discretionary power whatever and must honor requisitions, as they are presented in good faith, as much so as a peace officer must serve a warrant.

After all, it seems that the story about Henry Watterson wanting to be Governor of Kentucky and the nominee of his party for President was well founded. It would be mighty hard for thousands of Democrats who imbibed their political tenets at the feet of this Galathee, years ago, to stand in the way of the star-eyed goddess of reform.

A Card from Mr. Woods.

TO MY FRIENDS AND THE PUBLIC: The election is over and I am defeated, which situation I cheerfully accept, and will say that I fully appreciate the many acts of kindness shown me by my friends in the past, and especially those in the last election.

I wish to say to those who voted against and worked against me on account of principle from their standpoint, I have no unkind feeling for them; and to those whose zeal under excitement led them to do and say things against me in order to secure my defeat I freely forgive and have no malice or unkind feeling in my heart for them or for any one else.

Wishing the people of my county prosperity and happiness,
I am, yours, etc.

D. Woods.

Caldwell's Close Race.

The races in Caldwell county were the closest in years. W. H. Jones, Republican candidate for Representative, won over McCluskey, Democrat, by 36 votes; E. G. Thompson, Republican candidate for Senator, carried the county over Porter by 16; Frank A. Pastear, Republican candidate for County Clerk, was defeated by Gresham, Democrat, by 43 votes; Pastear has held the office for 28 years as a Democrat. Wylie Jones, Democratic candidate for sheriff; W. M. Smith, Republican, Jailor; P. H. Darby, Republican, County Attorney; W. S. Randolph, Republican, for County Judge; R. O. Davis, Republican, for School Superintendent, were elected. W. D. Dawson, Democrat, for Assessor, won. The Republican majority last year over the Democrats was more than 200.

HENRY WATTERSON

Will Lecture in this City Tuesday, November 26.

Hon. Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, will deliver his famous lecture, "Money and Morals," at the opera house in this city Tuesday night, Nov. 26th. Manager Walker, of the opera house, secured the famous editor and statesman under a heavy guarantee. Watterson is one of the most popular speakers on the American platform. "Money and Morals" has carried all audiences by storm, wherever it has been heard. He is regarded as a probable candidate for governor of Kentucky in 1903, and many look upon him as a logical candidate for the presidency.

The lecture is the second attraction of the "Brilliant Constellation" lyceum course. Seats will be placed on sale Monday. All next week the prices will be 25c, 50c, and 75c. After Saturday, Nov. 22d, the prices will be advanced. Holders of season tickets are requested to secure their seats Monday.

Wet or Dry.

One of the local questions now agitating the usually placid atmosphere of Marion is this, Will the new city council grant saloon license? There was some agitation of the question before the election, but no concert of action was taken by the anti-saloon element; an effort was made to center these forces on a ticket known to be dry but only limited interest was taken in the matter and but a few votes were cast for that ticket; the men who will constitute the new board have not expressed themselves publicly, but it seems to be understood that it is a "wet" council.

LOST.—On Friday, a spotted male hog, weight 180 lbs, right ear cropped and split; crop off left and bob tailed. Any information gladly received, J. P. Reed,

MINING NOTES.

Two Rich Carbonate of Zinc Veins Opened.

Col D. C. Roberts, who has the management of the mines on Wm Munn's farm, near the line between Crittenden and Livingston counties, came up Saturday to spend Sunday in Marion. He is always chatty on the mining question, and is one of the best posted men on the ores, veins, dykes, shafts, et cetera, of this section. "We have a rich mine on the Mann place," he said to the PRESS "and expect to be shipping fine zinc ore within ten days. We are taking out chunks of ore that weigh from 400 to 800 pounds and our work now is of the initiative character only; we are simply uncovering and shaping the shaft; and drifts for the real work, when the real work begins we will show some fine carbonates of zinc as was ever taken from the earth.

A law suit is pending in the United States court to settle the validity of the lease under which Messrs Roberts and Dr J. J. Clark are working this mine. Morton & Langbaugh, of Cleveland, Ohio, claim to hold a lease that antedates the Roberts contract and the suit is against James & James, Moore & Moore, and Clark & Roberts. It will come up for trial at Paducah next week. The parties in possession do not seem to be disturbed by the suit, and do not anticipate any serious impediment in establishing the validity of their contract.

Mr. J. N. Clark, who has been one of the most faithful prospectors in this belt since the excitement began, has at last struck it rich. For eighteen months, with pick and shovel, he has toiled unceasingly, meeting with disappointment after disappointment. His nerve never failed and hope carried him on. A short time ago he began work on the McDowell lease, near the Mann place, and last week he uncovered a vein of fine carbonate of zinc, and now his long delayed expectations are about to be realized. John deserves success and the PRESS congratulates him upon his splendid find of pay dirt.

A False Report.

There are some people who delight in telling sensational stories. Thursday night certain individuals circulated the absurd report that the opera house floor weakened and "was quivering." The report was absolutely false. Those who circulated it had no reasons for doing so, other than a desire to frighten some one. There is not the least danger. The house is perfectly safe. Only a few months ago an entirely new north wall of brick, eighteen inches in thickness was erected. I have had reliable and competent architects and brick masons to examine the house. They all agree that the house is perfectly safe. Those who have been circulating the reports are not competent to judge the condition of the house, and have nothing to substantiate the sensational report.

PANTHER ABROAD.

A Strange "Varmint" has Charge Of the Forest.

For some two weeks an animal unknown to the native hunters has been occasionally crossing the pathway of the citizens of Zion Hill neighborhood, and a scope of country east of and adjacent thereto. Those who have been so unfortunate as to have their eyes shocked by the sight of this unwelcome neighborhood terror describe it as larger than the largest dog, long and lithe of body, attenuated tail, short, round head brownish color. In moving slowly it treads softly, like a cat; in traveling rapidly it has the gallop of the pony. It is shy and reticent in the presence of man, but woe to the dog that has the nerve to tackle it. Its scream has been frequently heard and sounds much like a child crying. There are heavily wooded hills and hollows in that section, affording ideal places of refuge and lair for such an animal, and its uncanny voice is often heard in the depths of the forest. A few nights ago a farmer's dogs gave chase, and the three big canines had no trouble in coming into the presence of his beastship, but they did have trouble in returning, and when they came out of the combat they were howling like Schley's guns at Santiago and were battered like Cerveras ships. A hunting party will be organized and a stiff fight made to rid the community of the animal.

A Hunting Party.

A party composed of Dr. T. J. Daughtrey, Cashier E. J. Hayward Lewis Daughtrey, John Baker, Will Deboe, D. Crowell, James Stewart, Albert Drennum and Gus Graves went to Reelfoot Lake last week on a hunting excursion; they will also hunt in Missouri and Arkansas, and will be gone several weeks. They are traveling overland and have a complete camping outfit.

WIDOWS OF PRESIDENTS.

With Less Strain on Their Mind and Body Their Lives Are Longer.

Lives of presidents remind us that, as a rule, they are much shorter than those of their wives. At this time there is but one person living who was elected president of the republic, yet there are several widows of presidents, and there are fewer now than formerly. Mr. Cleveland and his genial wife still survive in good health. Mrs. Harrison still lives, but the Mrs. Harrison who entered the white house in 1880 ended her life there. Arthur was a widower when he became president, but Mrs. Garfield and Mrs. Grant are still living. Mrs. Lincoln lived until recently, and it is not long since Mrs. Tyler and Mrs. Polk died.

Not counting assassinations, says the Philadelphia Inquirer, presidents elected in the last 50 years have been short lived, or, at least, have not long survived their incumbency. Harrison died in office, but Tyler lived longer after leaving the white house than most of his successors. Polk lived but a few months after his term. Taylor died in office, and Fillmore did not long survive. Pierce was the youngest man up to his time who entered the white house, and died a comparatively young man. Buchanan was an older man, and his demise was not unexpected. Lincoln was assassinated and Johnson died soon after his term ended, just as he was about to take his seat in the senate, the only ex-president so honored. Grant survived his term eight years, Hayes a somewhat longer time, Arthur died a comparatively young man, and Harrison, though not young, was supposedly vigorous. McKinley's untimely death completes the list.

The burdens of the office of president are great, and as it is usually reached only after many years of labor in the field of statesmanship, it is not unusual that the vitality of the incumbent is sapped. In four years McKinley had aged more than a business man would in ten. With the wife of the president the situation is different. There are a few months in the year when the duties of hospitality are somewhat taxing to the strength, but during the rest she has no cares and responsibilities except those of a domestic kind. The housekeeping is largely done for her and if she had a comfortable home her years might be those of pleasantness and peace. Unfortunately, the white house now is no larger than it was a century ago, while the increasing demands of the public service have turned most of its rooms into offices. Surely this great and rich nation might provide for its president and his family accommodations equal to that of the ordinarily prosperous business man. When the Roosevelt family moves into the white house it will be cramped as never before, and if there is to be a guest room the children will have to sleep in closets or on cots and trundle beds. There has been much complaint on this score by past mistresses of the mansion, but now that there are more children to be accommodated than ever before the new mistress of the white house will often sigh for the roomy house on Sagamore hill, where, until recently, her family was so comfortably accommodated.

Unconventional Beliefs. Half a century ago women were still generally believed in. So, too, were charms. I had a cousin who seriously undertook to charm away warts, and was supposed to have succeeded. She was believed to have inherited the secret from her father, a Wesleyan minister. My uncle, a farmer, and by no means a credulous man, when about to visit London for the first time, and feeling some trepidation, consulted a doctor, who, I believe, is still living, the last surviving school fellow of the famous George Burrow. The doctor handed him a small vial of quicksilver, as certain, if kept in the pocket, to avert all harm. Doubtless the doctor laughed in his sleeve, for doctors were then getting incredulous, and I remember it being commonly said of another practitioner that he believed neither in God nor devil. Nearly 20 years later, when a cousin who, born a Wesleyan, had turned Quaker and came up to London to the annual gathering of that body, he showed me, with a smile, the identical vial of mercury. His mother, good soul, had borrowed it from her brother so that her son might likewise benefit by it.—Westminster Review.

The men are getting their rights. When a man gets too much pork these days, and gets sick, his friends find that giving over the death of his wife, or his grandmother, caused his illness. Men never used to get any credit for poetic instincts.—Atchison Globe.

A Blank Day. First Friend—"The birds are terribly wild to-day." Second Friend—"Not half so wild as our host will be if it keeps on like this."—Punch.

Revenge is like a mule—it works both ways.—Chicago Daily News.

An Evolution.

"Do come home with me to dinner. I want you to meet my eccentric old uncle, John."

"Eccentric!" It was only a year ago that you said he was an old bore. "I know, but that was before his brother left him a fortune."—St. Louis Republic.

A Queer Fraternity. I asked an old colored man to tell me something of his history. He said that he had been born in Virginia, and sold into Alabama in 1855. I asked him how many were sold at the same time. He replied: "There were five of us, myself and brother and three nudes." From Booker T. Washington's "Up from Slavery."

That Settled It. Brunkerhoff—I thought you intended to become a piano virtuoso. Bunkerhoff—I did; but my father says that I will be prematurely bald.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Whole we pretend it is scorn, it is really envy that we feel for the self-satisfied person.—Brooklyn Life.

Slanderers are known by the seed they sow.—Ran's Horn.

Nine out of ten people are looking for sympathy.—Atchison Globe.

Board of Public "Imps."

"The administration board is a nuisance and ought to be suppressed by law," said a man in the office of the board of public improvements. "But the limit was reached the other day when a letter came in here addressed, 'Mr. Sound-So, Board of Public Imps.'"

"Maybe that was neither a joke nor the result of carelessness," returned one of his associates. "Perhaps the man meant it, 'on the level.'"—N. Y. Times.

What's in a Name. "Ah!" he sighed, after she had blushingly whispered, "Yes" in his bosom, "my own mental help! Of that name's no formal. Surely your friends use some shorter one; some pet name."

"Well," she murmured, "the girl at boarding school used to call me 'Pickles.'"—Philadelphia Press.

The Killed. Slows—Was the footman on his automobile killed? Slows—No, but several foot men on the road were.—Judge.

Repartee. Aristocrat—I understand that your grandfather made horseshoes. Philanthropist—Yes, he made some for your grandfather once and the bill isn't receipted yet.—Somerville Journal.

Meanest Man in Kansas.

Not long ago the wife of a western Kansan politician asked him to lay aside politics long enough one day to dig the potatoes in the garden. He agreed to do it. After digging for a few minutes he went into the house and said he had found a coin. He washed it off and it proved to be a silver quarter. He put it in his pocket and went back to work. Presently he went to the house again and said he had found another coin. He washed the dirt off it. It was a silver half dollar. He put it in his pocket. "I have worked pretty hard," said he to his wife. "I guess I'll take a short nap." When he awoke he found that his wife had dug all the rest of the potatoes. But she had dug no coins. It then dawned upon him that she had been "worked."—Kansas City Journal.

The Modern Elopement. "Are you sure there will be no hitch in our elopement?" anxiously asked the bridegroom. "How could there be a hitch?" assured the ardent lover. "When we are going in an automobile!"—Chicago Daily News.

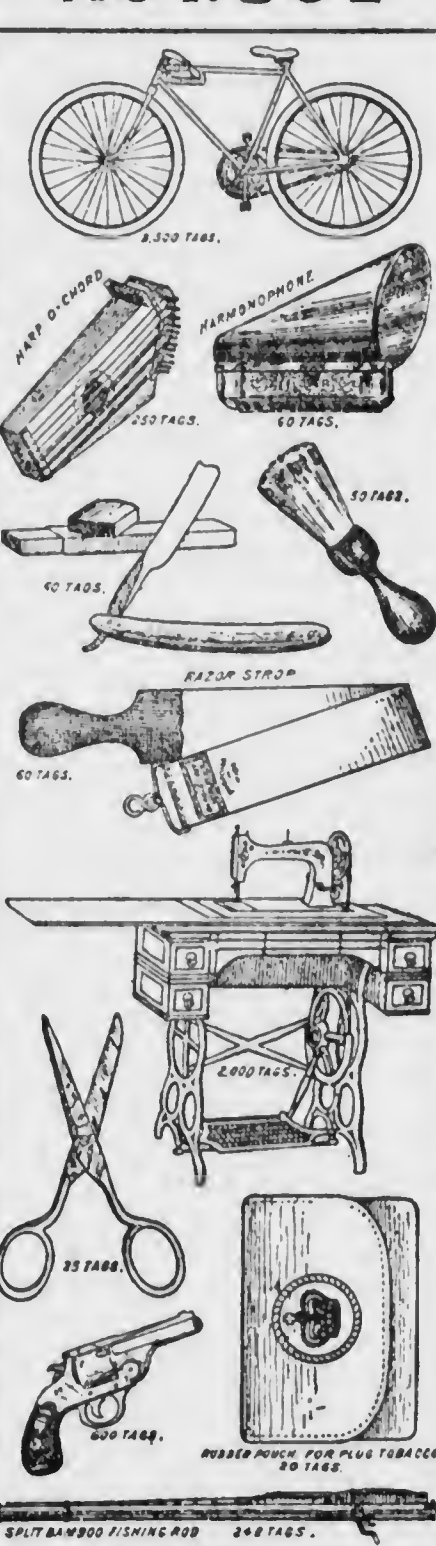

Life's Little Frictions. "Are you getting ready for winter?" "No, yes. We've had our last snow, with the 30 men and have been toasting with the usual man."—Detroit Free Press.

NEWS OF THE COUNTY.

NEW SALEM.

The health of our people is very good.

Esq. Charley Stevens and wife of Salem were the guests of his brother-in-law W. C. Tynor's family this week.

Look out for a wedding next week, but you can not guess who.

Enele Samuel Woolford was confined to his room and bed last week with sickness.

The wheat crop looks promising.

Hog killing will soon be here, we are hungry.

Well, the election is a thing of the past. We hope the lying on the ground will stop.

Mrs. Jane Tynor and Mrs. Deboe Pinckneyville came up last week to visit their sick kinsman, Jesse Tynor, who is still confined to his bed.

Miss Jennie Parker, of Livingston county, spent last week as the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Susan "Red" Old.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy and find it a great medicine," says Mr. E. S. of Poteau, Ark. "It cured me of dysentery, I cannot speak too highly of it. This remedy always wins the opinion, if not praise of those who use it. The quick cures which it effects in the most severe cases, make it a household remedy everywhere." At Woods'.

Mahan has commenced to shift on his farm, hunting for a new place of any kind that may be had. Bob says he will go to China or find some place where they keep the old bull-headed liars warm.

Well, if the good Book is which it is, and Bob keeps saying he might come upon a place where they keep the old bull-headed liars warm.

The widow Fannie Davis has moved on the farm of Will Lowrey.

We are glad to report that Mrs. Smith Lowrey, who has been sick for quite a while, is thought to be improving.

To remove a troublesome cork or bunion, first soak the corn or bunion in warm water to soften it, then pare down as closely as possible without drawing blood and apply Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice daily; rub vigorously for five minutes at each application. A corn plaster should be used for a few days to protect it from the shoe. As a general anodyne for sprains, bruises, rheumatism and rheumatism, Pain Balm is unequalled. At Woods & Co's.

Your correspondent visited the railroad camp near Salem a few days ago. Well, they mean business. With a bank, a roller mill, and a round house at Salem, what is to hinder her from getting up and getting it.

We will bet a gill of blind tiger bitters that our neighbor, Bill Tynor has raised more pumpkins than any ten farmers in Crittenden county. The whole face of the earth around Bill's ranch is covered with them, and to make it so much better, Bill says bring your wagon and get a load, and you bet your sweet life we will.

The protracted meeting began at Tyners Chapel Nov 10, and protracted meetings will commence at New Salem and Emmus next Saturday, it being the 3rd Saturday in Nov.

Modern Surgery Surpassed.

"While suffering from a bad case of piles I consulted a physician who had advised me to try a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve," says J. F. Carter of Atlanta, Ga. "I procured a box and was entirely cured. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a splendid cure for piles, giving relief instantly, and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers." Surgery is unnecessary to cure piles. Witch Hazel Salve will cure any case. Cuts, burns, bruises and all other wounds are quickly cured by it. Beware of counterfeits. Haynes'.

Almost every family in these parts are now enjoying the weekly visits of the Press, and its busy pages are like receiving a letter from a good old friend. We think every citizen of the county should take the Press. It is in our opinion the best county paper in Western Kentucky. We know of other county papers costing the same money that do not give more than half as much news as the Press, and having been one of its readers several years we have always found it containing for the right and working for the interests of home and home affairs.

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

NEURALGIA BANISHED.
There is no more severe and stubborn pain than neuralgia. A remedy which will cure it will cure any pain. Dr. G. S. Stivers, dentist, Louisville, Ky., says: "My wife suffered over two years with very severe neuralgia, which several physicians failed to relieve. I then bought Morley's Wonderful Balm, which relieved her in five minutes and soon effected a permanent cure. At Woods & Co's.

Question Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Biliousness. Doctors were scarce and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. For sale by R. F. Haynes and J. H. Orme.
